

This Norfolk Love

What does love mean to you? What was your favourite love affair?

This Norfolk Love is a festival of stories run by the BBC in Norfolk. It is part of the BBC Voices series This Norfolk Life, giving people the chance to write about themselves, their lives, where they live, their thoughts and feelings.

We are looking for unpublished stories and poems inspired by the title This Norfolk Love.

You can write whatever you want, fact or fiction, traditional or unconventional. It could be about a partner, family member, friends, favourite things – or about what love means to you.

It just needs to be written by you in your own way in a maximum of 500 words. We also want a photo or picture to go with your story.

A selection of stories will be published online at bbc.co.uk/norfolk, broadcast on BBC Radio Norfolk and displayed on our Love Board in The Forum from the 14th to the 28th February, 2006.

They will also be stored in the Norfolk Record Office as part of BBC Voices People's Archive – recording experiences of daily life now for future generations.

Please return the application form, contributor contract form, your story and photo or picture to This Norfolk Love, BBC Voices, The Forum, Millennium Plain, Norwich, NR2 1BH.

Closing date 14th February, 2006.
